Washington, February 8,—The Senate to day passed the Indian appropriation bill, which has been the subject of consideration throughout the week. Senator Frazier made an address on the subject of States rights, after which the army appropriation bill, carrying a total of $41,500,000, was taken up. The army measure was partly read for approval of committee amendments, and adjournment was taken shortly before 6 o'clock, when it became apparent that considerable debate was to be occasioned by an amendment to permit the government to receive reduced rates from the railroads on the transportation of troops and supplies for the army, and to allow army efficers and their families to accept free transportation. The adoption of this gmendment would be a modification of the railroad rate bill passed at the last session of Congress.

TRIBUTE OF JAMES BRYCE

Painting Is Gift of George C. Thomas, Philadelphia Millionaire and Philanthropist.

Miss Mary Custis Lee, honorary president of the Home for Needy Confederate Women, unveiled in the pariors of the Home yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock, a portrait of her father, General R. E. Lee, presented through her, by the Philadelphia millionaire and philanthropist, Mr. George C. Thomas.

The members of the board of the Home, a number of Confederate veterans, the ladies resident in the Home, and friends interested in it gathered in the spacious parlors to the left of the entrance to witness the unveiling ceremonles.

sided and introduced Mr. Joseph Bryan, who presented the portrait.

Tribute to Lee.

In his remarks Mr. Bryan referred to the many tributes paid to General Lee by men of other sections of the country, quoting Henry Catbot Lodge and Charles Francis Adams, who said recently that, situated as General Lee was, he would have acted in the same way. Lastly, he mentioned President Roosevelt, as in joining in the pacans of praise evoked by the celebration of the Lee centennial. He said that the donor of the portrait was a wealthy, charitable and busy man, bound to Virginia and Virginians by no tie or association, being moved solely by a manly desire to honor merit and nobility of character, as evidenced in the person of Robert Edward Lee.

Mr. Bryan read a letter from Mr. Thomas to Miss Lee, dated January 21, 1907, in which Mr. Thomas said that the portrait was painted by an artist named W. S. King, to whom General Lee gave several sittings while he was in the midst of the campaign around Petersburg. Mr. Thomas also said that the portrait was offered for said in Philadelphia, and that he would be glad to purchase it and present it to the Home, which he had been helping for several years for Miss Lee's sake, if she approved of his intention.

A contribution to Miss Lee's autograph album, made while she was in England, by the present English ambassador to the United States, the Hon, James Bryce, was quoted by Mr. Bryan to the effect that Mr. Bryce found it impossible to write anything in Miss Lee's album without expressing admiration for the pure and lofty character of her father, who was honored and respected alike by foes and friends.

After Mr. Bryan's remarks were ended, Miss Lee's album without expressing admiration for the pure and lofty character of her father, who was honored and fespected alike by foes and friends.

After Mr. Bryan's remarks were ended, Miss Lee drew aside the Confederate flag which yelled the portrait that was considered a splendid likeness by all present. The portrait is a bust length and shows Tribute to Lee.

The program closed with the singing of Dixle and other Southern airs, the music being directed by Mrs. W. J. Gilman, with Mr. Reginald Walker as accompanist.

Tea was served later, Mrs. John Murphy, Mrs. James Sutton, and Mrs. H. H. Pollard presiding at the tea-table, placed in the reception parlor.

Airs. A. J. Pyle was chalrman of arrangements for the atternoon, and Mrs. Montague, the president of the Home, added by her thoughtfulness to the bleasure of all present. The fact that Miss Lee took an active part in the cremonies of the occasion was most gratifying to the members of the board and the laddes resident at the Home.
